HOMERO TEATRO THE DEAD CLASS

The dead class shapes a school class populated by old students who cling to their memory in an agonizing attempt to revive what they once were.

Kantor imposes himself as the teacher of an absurd litany that pathetic schoolchildren repeat or forget in an infinite spiral, in addition, he deconstructs a delirious theatrical text whose characters are occasionally assumed by the actors to reveal the irrelevance of all action in the face of presence palpable of death.

In this procession of absolutely carnal ghosts, the irruption of humor and slight emotional notes in such darkness constitutes one of the characteristics of the theater of death.
